

Jon Freedman
Senior Vice President – Global Government Affairs
SUEZ Water Technologies & Solutions

Jon is based in Washington, DC, where he leads global government affairs for SUEZ Water Technologies & Solutions.

Previously, Jon led global government affairs for GE Water and GE-Hitachi Nuclear Energy. He also served as a director for GE's Corporate Marketing Initiatives Group, where he was the project leader responsible for developing GE's global environmental sustainability initiative (Ecomagination). He also helped GE build a global water company by creating GE's strategy for water and then leading the acquisition of an NYSE-listed global water company.

Jon currently serves on the Advisory Committee of The Wharton School's Institute for Global Environmental Leadership, as well as on the Board of Directors for the WaterReuse Association. In addition, he teaches a class at the University of Pennsylvania called "The Future of Water."

Jon holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Virginia, a law degree from William & Mary, and an MBA from The Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania.
